> Ariella and I enjoyed lunch with you and Nili it was nice seeing you again.
> I found your input very incisive and I agree with you completely especially with the issue of taking a high moral ground. We in Israel don't realize or understand what it would be like being isolated and ostracized,and have no feel for the feeling of boycott and economic isolation.
> This brought the white government in South Africa to its knees , we also don't understand how time is working against us . If we don't negotiate an honest agreement with intent we will eventually be forced to accept much worse conditions.
> I also think that the cost of the support of the settlements is having its impact on the quality of living in Israel.
> As I mentioned in my previous email to you Haaretz is having another peace conference which would be a great platform for you to go public with your views. I am sure the public in large will respond to your analyses.
